FAREWELL ADDRESS WAS CAMPAIGN CRY, WRISTON DECLARES

Lawrence President Says
Washington's Advice Was Based on 1789 Conditions

St. Paul, Minn.—(AP)—Washington's famous Farewell Address was "a campaign document for the approaching election," and was not intended as a permanent guide for the foreign policy of the United States, Dr. Henry M. Wriston, president of Lawrence College, Appleton, said in discussing the first president of the country at the 1927 convention of the Minnesota Society, Dancibles of the American Revolution, here Thursday night.

"The Farewell address dealt with many topics, not alone with foreign affairs," the speaker said. "Parties, for example, received considerable attention. Fundamentally, the address was an explanation of the past, of Washington's two administrations. It was also advice for the future, but especially the immediate future; it was a campaign document for the approaching election. An opportunity was offered Washington to defend his course, which has been frequently questioned by his contemporaries, and to set forth the philosophy of his behavior and policy, as well as furnish a platform for his followers."

ADDRESS ABUSED
"The Farewell address may fairly be said to belong to the ages, but it is frequently abused and misunderstood."

"Washington's doctrine of 'diplomatic isolation,' expounded in the address, rested upon three salient facts: 'First, Europe was the world of international relations; second, we were in no condition, by reason of political immaturity, economic instability, and smallness of size, to play a leading or aggressive part. The validity of the doctrine was certain to be

WHERE CHINESE ARE FIGHTING

The region where China's war lords are at close grips is shown here. Driving northward through Chekiang province to attack Shanghai and gain control of all territory south of the Yangtze river, Cantonese or South China forces have taken Hangchow and Ningpo. Meanwhile Marshal Chang Tsolin, North China's ruler, is hitting back by sending troops southward through Honan province to attack Hankow, the Cantonese capital.

impaired whenever those factors changed. "All these factors have changed to day, Dr. Wriston pointed out. "The United States of 1789 was not yet a nation. Today it is a nation in the fullest sense. There is no longer a question whether we shall remain one people. That question came to its dramatic climax in 1861. The new government of Washington's day is today one of the two governments in the whole world which have not been overthrown or reorganized by revolution since that time. The United States had not, in Washington's day, fully vindicated its diplomatic independence. Today the United States is free to choose peace or war as our interests, guided by the principles of justice, shall require."

CHANGED STATUS
"From being a debtor in default, and in economic disorder, we have become the greatest creditor nation in the history of the world. In a single decade we have moved from the position of the largest borrower in history to that of the largest lender."

"Europe was the world of 1789. Since then a new world has come into being. We no longer have a pressing demand for expansion of territory and the United States stands now as the leader of the American continents."

"Finally, the geographic position of the United States no longer invites us to go it alone. From a position on the fringe of the world, we have come to stand at its center, the only world power facing both the Atlantic and the Pacific. The Panama Canal has become the fifth avenue and the Forty-second street of world commerce."

"These hands that now attach us to the fate of Europe and Asia are not the 'artificial' ties that Washington deplored. They are the natural and inevitable ties of an integrated world. Our economic destiny is already 'interwoven' and 'entangled' with that of Europe—and through no one's plan or design, and by no act of politicians or statesmen. The ties represent a process of growth which, if now reversed, would mean a complete reorganization of our economic system such as very few would be ready to contemplate."

"George Washington was, before all else, a practical man. He was not a doctrinaire. He built his policy and framed his explanation of it to suit the facts of his day."

CAUSTIC DEBATE IN STATE SENATE

Cashman and Schumann Argue Appropriations to Farm Organizations

Madison—(AP)—An old time senate session, replete with spirited debating and caustic repartee extended Thursday's session until at the suggestion of Senator Morris, Milwaukee, the members took up and passed on a majority of Friday's work.

Urged on by repeated demands for a speeding up of legislation, the lawmakers disposed of a loaded calendar in their overtime session. In the absence of Lieutenant Governor H. A. Huber, there was more informality than hitherto. Senator W. L. Smith, Neillsville, held the gavel.

A number of bills were sent for engrossment and a few minor bills passed without argument. It was not until bills brought over from Friday's calendar concerning appropriations were brought up for passage that discussion halted the proceedings.

After passing two appropriation bills relating to forest preservation and a two year appropriation of $175,000 to the State Historical Library, Senators Cashman, Denmark and Schumann, Watertown, started a lively debate against the passage of bills appropriating money to cheesemakers and poultry associations. Senator Titus, Fond du Lac, chairman of the finance committee passing on appropriations, defended his committee's recommendations.

TRY FOR ADJOURNMENT
During the discussions Senator Morris made a motion for adjournment, which was voted down. Temporary president Smith asked that the senators "would, please, not ramble, but confine themselves to the business of the day."

Senator Carroll, Glidden, presented a resolution asking the attorney general for an opinion relating to pay-

TAKE ELECTRIC WIRING BIDS UNTIL MONDAY

Bids for changing electric wiring in the city hall will be received at 4 o'clock Monday afternoon by the public grounds and building committee of the common council, according to Wenzel Hassman, chairman. The present wiring is inadequate and is a serious fire hazard, Fire Chief G. P. McGilton told the aldermen at the last council meeting. The council instructed the public buildings committee to receive bids and have a report for the next meeting of the council.

FIRE EXTINGUISHED IN GARAGE OF OIL COMPANY

A small fire which might have resulted in a serious conflagration was extinguished in truck of the Wadsworth Oil Co. garage on Railroad-ave at about 1:30 Thursday afternoon. The fire, which originated from a short circuit in the truck wiring system was put out with chemicals. Two trucks from the fire department were sent to the garage to guard against a spread of the flames. Officials of the oil company pointed out that if the fire had spread, large tanks of oil might have become ignited, resulting in a blaze of enormous proportions.

IMMEDIATE REPAIR OF LITTLE CHUTE BRIDGE POSTPONED

War Department Will Agree to Grant Time in Order, Attorney Reports

The war department will not demand immediate repair of the canal bridge on county trunk highway "N" at Little Chute, John A. Lonsdorf, district attorney, said Thursday.

Mr. Lonsdorf and A. G. Byers, county highway commissioner, spent Wednesday at Milwaukee with Major J. Kingman discussing the Little Chute project.

The bridge is in such bad condition that a new structure probably will be built in preference to repairing it, according to Mr. Lonsdorf. No definite time has been set in which to complete the construction, but it definitely will not be undertaken for a couple of years.

In 1924 the war department ordered Little Chute to repair the bridge. In view of the fact that the county had adopted the highway running over the bridge in the county trunk system, Little Chute took the matter to court to determine whether the village was responsible for the work.

The United States district court of Eastern Wisconsin found in favor of the village a few months ago. In consequence of this ruling, a resolution was presented to the county board at its February session proposing an appropriation of $3,000 to finance the repair of the bridge. On the recommendation of Supervisor Anton Janson, Little Chute, the matter was referred to the highway commissioner and the county highway commissioner with instructions to report at the April session of the board.

The board believed that if the war department would agree to a delay in the order, a new bridge could be built in a few years. Because of the present condition of the bridge, the board did not believe it would be worth while to put in $3,000 in the structure.

Mr. Lonsdorf and Mr. Byers were assured by Major Kingman that a delay in the time for making the order would be granted, they reported upon their return from Milwaukee.

WARM, COLD WATER AIDS CHILLBLAINS

Home Treatment of This Nature
Is Advisable by State
Health Committee

Madison—Chillblains and frost bites may be given an effective home treatment by the application of warm and cold water to stimulate the circulation, the Health Committee of the State Medical Society announced as the result of many requests as to how to handle these afflictions.

"There are several degrees of reaction to cold depending on the damage done to the tissues," says the bulletin. "The least damaging is chilblains, where there is merely a slight swelling and reddening. The other types are known as frost bite and are seen in all varieties from swelling and blisters with subsequent peeling to actual destruction of the part by gangrene. The first sign of trouble is numbness and pallor."

"Treatment should consist in improving the circulation of the nipped area gradually. Care should be taken not to apply too much heat at once or to stimulate the affected part with snow—is said to be condemned by Arctic explorers, and they certainly should be in a position to know something about frozen fingers and toes. It has been said that the late Admiral Peary lost all of his toes except the great toes through freezing. The simplest method is to subject the nipped part to body heat as by the application of a warm hand and very gentle friction. After circulation has been restored, the part must be kept warm and dry. It should be wrapped in cotton or wool, loosely banded and not used. Greasy preparations should be avoided. Dry dressings should be applied. Blisters should not be opened except by a physician. As soon as first aid has been rendered, a frost bitten person should have the attention of a competent physician. Once the part becomes gangrenous, surgical procedures are essential."

"Unfortunately a part once frost bitten is rendered more liable to future attack. If you are one of those who is susceptible to chilblains you may be able to ward off this trouble before cold weather sets in. The basis of this treatment is to accustom the blood vessels to sudden changes in temperature. It consists in bathing the parts alternately in cold water and in water as hot as can be borne for fifteen minutes each day. The treatment should be continued for several weeks. Do this next year and you will probably pass through the winter much more comfortably."

A champion sneak thief in Germany recently demonstrated his claim to the little by sneaking into prison two hours after his release and stealing his picture from the rogue's gallery.

Light Color, Light Weight Will Feature Spring Shoes

Street shoes will be light in color and in weights next spring, local dealers predict. Patent leather will be good but it will not be the universal footwear it has been for several seasons, it was said.

Light grey, rose blush, beige, oyster grey, pastel parchment or stone are among the colors to be popular when the warm days come. Kid leathers will be shown in greatest numbers but light grey suedes will be smart for dress wear. Black satins with fancy buckles and even with head effects will be worn for evening occasions.

In extreme styles, high heels predominate but a lower Cuban or junior spike heel will be best for street wear. A one and four-eighths heel will be seen for street shoes and a one and seven-eighths heel for dress and afternoon wear.

Narrow straps and tie-effects will be modes often seen on the street. Most of the tied shoes show cutouts at the sides. Oxford too will appear in the better shoes. Fancy effects will be attended by trimming light colored kids with darker pipings, colored patent leathers as chanel red and copper. Plain pumps with neither buckle nor strap will be well considered by the women this spring.

Sports shoes will be shown with thick soles and novel trimmings. Plain light colored leathers have alligator leather and darker trimmings, and saddle effects are cut out to give a style different than the more conventional plain saddle.

Attachable and detachable buckles are among the new accessories for spring. They may be worn with the plain so-called "strip" pumps and are attached to a rubber tongue which slips under the shoe. Another addition in some of the local stores in a cleaning and refinishing apparatus for the light colored leathers. The shoes come out of the process as they are when they first come from the tanneries, the dealers claimed. This will eliminate the former shabby appearance of light shoes when they have been worn for a few weeks.

TEACHERS STUDY CLINIC COSTUMES

200 Children to Take Part in Indian Cantata of Musical Program

Costumes for the Indian cantata which will be sung by fifth and sixth grade children at the grade night of the spring music clinic on Wednesday night, March 9, were discussed at the meeting of grade teachers with Dr. Earl L. Baker, supervisor of music, Wednesday afternoon. Indian blankets will be worn by the boys, native costumes by the girls and an Indian setting will be arranged for "The Childhood of Hiawatha." Two hundred children will do two-part singing in the cantata. Harold Zuehlke and Reynold Chalmers will have charge of the lighting effects of the production.

An announcement was made of the other two clinic programs. Thursday, March 10 the junior high schools will take part. Five hundred boys, every boy in the three schools, will sing in the boys' chorus. On this night the schools will compete for the silver cups awarded to the group giving the best demonstrations. Last year Roosevelt boys and Wilson girls won the cups.

"The Rose Maiden," a cantata, will be sung by the glee clubs of Appleton high school on March 11. The school orchestra and band will accompany them.

Dress rehearsal for the grade program will be held at the choral on Monday, March 7. The new work in music appreciation was discussed by the teachers. Usually Dr. Baker supervises the different grades once a week and teaches the classes for the benefit of the teacher. In March the teachers will teach the music and Dr. Baker will assist, it was said.

KAUKAUNA LOCK-TO BE REPAIRED NEXT WEEK

Repairs on the Third lock at Kaukauna will be completed within the next week, according to E. P. Everett, United States engineer. The wooden supports in the interior of the lock were removed and are being replaced by concrete supports which are more substantial, according to Mr. Everett.

DEMAND FOR LABOR IN CITY IS SMALL, BUREAUS INDICATE

Workers Exceed Jobs, Appleton Employment Agencies
Report

There is practically no demand for labor of any kind in Appleton at the present time, according to the various employment agencies throughout the city. The condition is practically the same as it has been for the past four months. There are many laborers looking for employment and practically all jobs are filled.

Paper mills report that orders are not large and practically all the positions which require trained help are filled. These positions are occupied the year around and there is hardly any turnover, one employment manager said. There is only a small demand for unskilled labor with perhaps five men looking for every job. Conditions at all plants are about the same.

The Y. M. C. A. Employment bureau reported that only a few men were placed last month. They report a large supply of labor and no demand. The Junior Employment bureau of the Appleton Vocational school reports that there is hardly any work for boys.

The Junior bureau also reports a large number of girls seeking domestic and factory work, with the demand small.

The same condition exists at the Appleton Woman's club employment bureau, according to Mrs. S. C. Shannon, president.

In Scotland where the Sabbath is rigidly observed, the municipality of Glasgow, in spite of protests, will allow children's swings in public parks to be used on Sundays.

ICE RINK DRAIN IS WORKING OUT WELL

The drain system installed at the first ward skating rink grounds is effective, according to R. F. Hackworth, street commissioner. The drain was tested the past week when the mild weather caused most of the ice on the rink to melt. Instead of flowing across the grounds and into the basements of the people living east of the rink, the water has been carried away through the new drain and no trouble has been experienced, according to Mr. Hackworth.

All services next Sunday will be transferred from the public hall building, where they have been held for several months to the new quarters. The Sunday school will convene at 9:30 as usual. At 10:30 the morning worship will be held. It is hoped that the new gymnasium will be ready in a few weeks but the dedication of the church proper will not be placed for some time. A large crew of painters and decorators is at work.

The first social event will be the annual father and son banquet which will probably be held Tuesday, March 1.

CITIZENS WARNED NOT TO BUY STOCK OVER TELEPHONE

High Pressure Sales Methods
Are Used to Get "Suckers" Money

Citizens of Appleton have been warned by the securities division of the Wisconsin Railroad commission that unlicensed stock and bond brokers and salesmen from Chicago and other outside cities are soliciting purchases of securities by long distance telephone, in connection with which high pressure sales methods are used. The securities offered for sale are often listed on some obscure or distant stock or curb exchange, and in general it may be assumed that arrangements have been made to advance the price by fictitious means. The party solicited is at first requested to put in but a small sum and watch the market quotations as they advance. This is but a bait to get a still larger order at a later date. When much of the sucker money has been gathered the market is advanced by these blue sky artists and the price falls, leaving the purchaser holding the bag.

Some of these high pressure salesmen, in advance of their telephone calls, send out prospectuses, unsigned letters and what purport to be papers designed to appear like proper financial publications, painting in deceptive language the alleged virtues of the all but worthless stocks which they desire to sell. Such advertising matter should be read with great caution, the division advises.

Dealers acting from without the state are beyond the jurisdiction of the Wisconsin courts. The operators are of the cleverest type and if one call doesn't get an order the calls are repeated. The promise quick profits, and in some instances, in order to induce a purchase, offer other inducements without intention to comply with their promises.

The commission suggests that Appleton people refrain from buying securities over the long distance telephone from cities outside the state. It is safer to buy from a home dealer. Giving an order to a stranger is dangerous because he outside the state and there fore outside the jurisdiction of the courts. If the operator had anything as good as the high pressure men claim, they would have no need to go to the great expense of doing business in this manner.

Say Hello and get acquainted. Come to the Old Time Dancing Party Friday, Feb. 25, Eagles Hall, Heinie.

BORAH'S NICARAGUAN JUNKET
Mr. Borah wishes to have the senate foreign relations committee sent on a tour to Mexico and Nicaragua. He wants to go down there, so he says, to discover conditions for himself in order that he and the foreign relations committee may properly advise the administration in its dealings with these countries. As a democratic approach to these problems, Mr. Borah's suggestion looks well in print and may sound well in oratory, but we doubt if anything is to be gained by it. In the first place, the senator would not go to Mexico or to Nicaragua with an open mind. He has taken a stand opposed to that of the president. What he would go down there for is to secure ammunition upon which to bolster up his theories as to the course we should follow. He would see only one side of the picture, and of course it is possible to get plenty of information to color it and intensify its high lights. Mr. Borah has not agreed with the last three administrations in anything pertaining to foreign policy. It is too late to expect him to modify his opinions now. In the second place, junkets of this kind are worthless on general principles. A couple of years ago we sent a congressional representation to Russia to study conditions there. It was made up of men sympathetic to the soviet regime. It was winned and dined by the bolsheviks and came back with a flattering report of the beauties of that regime, advocating that we extend immediate recognition to Russia. Its findings were obviously prejudiced and of no value to the government. On the contrary, they were distinctly detrimental for they gave a fresh impetus to an uninformed minority opinion in this country which was calling for recognition. We would get about the same results, no more and no less, from Mr. Borah's proposed junket. The state department has adequate channels of information in Mexico and Nicaragua through diplomatic and other reliable representatives. Mr. Borah's personally conducted tour would be a fine political adventure, to be cashed in on the floor of the senate and in the presidential campaign of the following year, but it would be of no earthly use to the government. When we commence to take the conduct of foreign relations out of the hands of the state department and the president and turn it over to traveling committees, we may as well say goodbye to our international prestige as well as to consistency and continuity in foreign policy. It is to be hoped that the administration will have sufficient votes in the senate to kill Mr. Borah's plan.

THE RADIO BILL
President Coolidge has signed the radio control bill. There was hardly any doubt that he would approve it. It could not matter whether he had technical objections to some of the details of the measure, he was bound to sign it in the interest of the public. As soon as a commission is appointed to administer the law, some seven or eight hundred broadcasters who now clutter up the air each night with a hodgepodge of jazz and propaganda, will be subject to a federal law under which they may be suppressed as nuisances. The commission should not worry over the popularity of its regulations with the public, for the listeners-in will rejoice at any steps to improve reception. They take it for granted that broadcasting stations of real merit will be given preference, and that those without merit, or with only a political pull to keep them on the air, will be relegated to a place of innocuous desuetude. It is to be hoped the commission will make a speedy and thorough job of radio control, so that by next winter at least its orders will be in full force, and effect. We do not believe any body of fair-minded men should have much trouble in establishing regulations, that will be ethical alike to the broadcasters and to the listeners-in. It is simply a matter of taking the bull by the horns and cleaning out the rubbish. Immediate improvement can be made by compelling those stations which have in the last year usurped wave lengths on which they can have no claim to return to the lower bands and their original assignments.

PROTECTORATE IN NICARAGUA
According to a dispatch from Managua, President Diaz desires the United States to assume a protectorate over Nicaragua for one hundred years. The dispatch adds that his proposal for a suggested treaty with this country will be presented before the Nicaraguan congress immediately, and that he has assurances it will be approved. Under the treaty he will suggest the United States be granted the right to intervene when necessary to maintain an adequate government and assure free elections. It would guarantee the sovereignty and independence of Nicaragua and would retain the right to build a canal through that country. The United States would be conceded the right to develop the country economically, administer the customs and fiscal affairs and would provide for the security of public health. It is an attractive proposal, to those Americans with financial, industrial and land holdings in Nicaragua. Undoubtedly they will favor it. It may also have its recommendations to the government, which has successfully administered the affairs of Haiti under a protectorate. It would spare it the necessity of sending marines and warships to Nicaragua periodically to safeguard American interests. It would suppress revolutionary outbreaks and restore order in that republic.

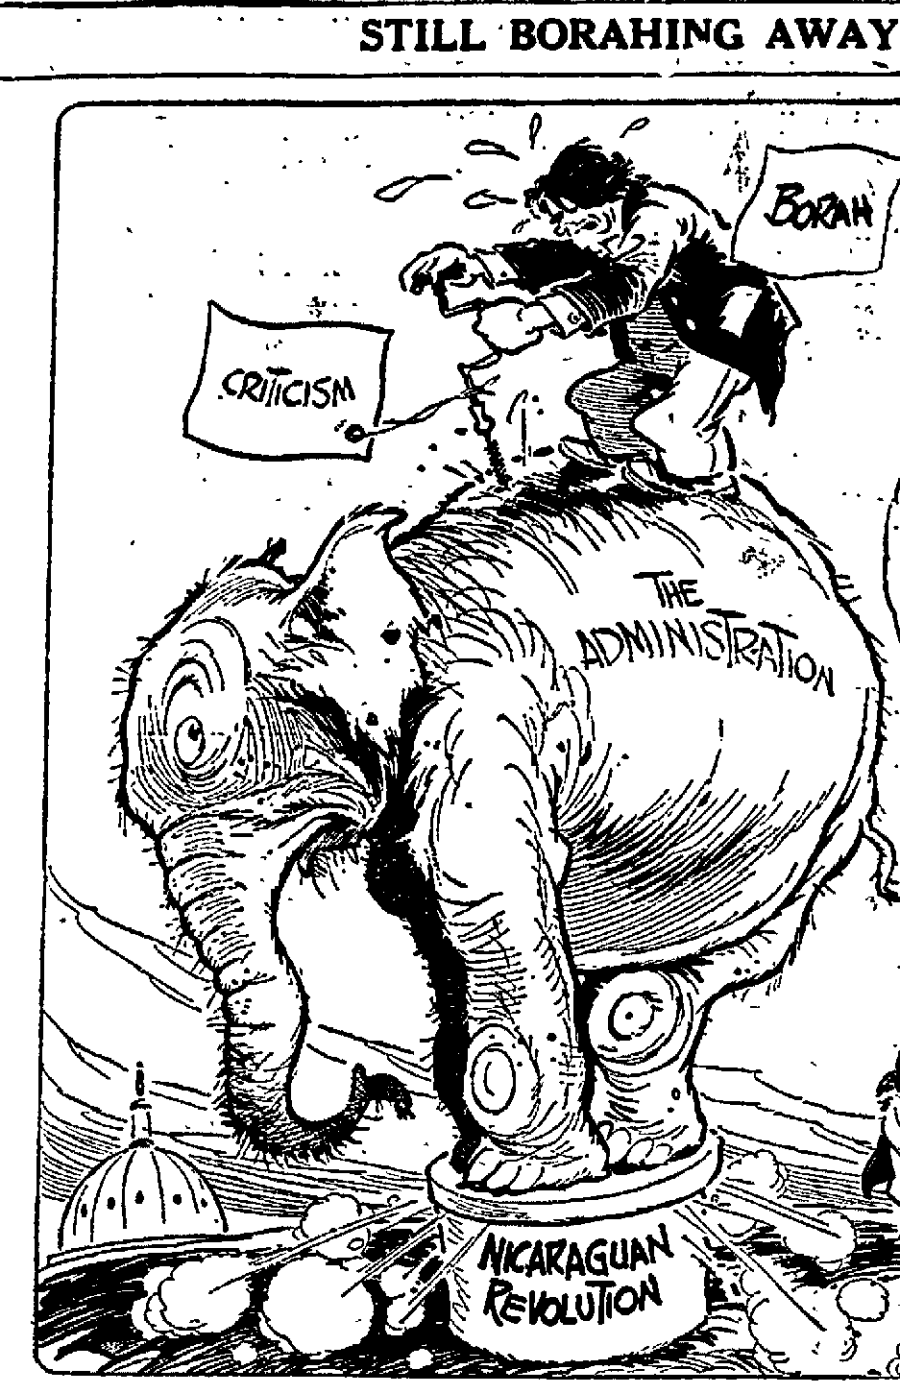

On the other hand, there are reasons for inferring that President Diaz is taking this step because he believes he can maintain himself in office in no other way. So far as we can gather from a distance, if the United States had not landed troops in Nicaragua the revolutionists would by this time have overthrown Diaz. If he can keep the presidency only so long as our marines restrain his enemies, he may figure it would be better for him and for Nicaragua to have them there indefinitely. On its part, the United States has to consider the effects of a Latin American policy that encourages the extension or acceptance of protectorates. It is not unlikely that other republics to the south will in years to come present problems requiring a similar choice by the government at Washington. Eventually the policy, if it prevails, might conceivably lead us to broaden our sovereignty over a large portion of Central America and portions of South America. It might be defended on material and economic grounds, but not we think on political grounds. It is, we believe, our duty to let these republics work out their own salvation, under restrictions that we may be compelled to impose to safeguard whatever measures we or our nationals take to assist in their development. We cannot afford from either political or selfish standpoints to alienate the goodwill of the South American continent, nor to give color to the European suspicion that we are after all a militaristic or rather imperialistic nation. There is a well-defined belief in South America that the United States covets territory in that region. It is worth more to us to disprove this assumption in the field both of commerce and investment and in the cause of American unity.

OLD MASTERS
O little self, within whose smallness lies All that man was, and is, and will become, Atom unseen that comprehends the skies And tells the tracks by which the planets roam; That, without moving, knows the joys of wings, The tiger's strength, the eagle's secrecy, And in the hovel can consort with kings, Or clothe a god with his own mystic. O, with what darkness do we cloak the light, How dusty folly gather the for food, How who alone art knowledge and delight, The heavenly bread, the beautiful, the good, O living self, O god, O morning star, Give us thy light, forgive us what we are. —John Massfield, Sonnet.
The Pons-Winnecke comet is coming to within 12 million miles of the earth in June. Col. Rupert, owner of the Yankees, wishes Babe Ruth would come that close. . . . Landis wasn't any farther away than that several times. . . . But 4 1/2 million miles is just a jaunt for a justice of the peace driving squad. . . . The tail of the comet, through which the earth must pass, shows traces of gas, the professors tell us. But we in America will not mind that. . . . We are glad to know it's a comet, anyhow. We had thought it was a bookcase. . . . And let's be thankful. No one can swim that far.
An Indian named Naqui, who can write 400 letters on a grain of rice, is coming to America. We wonder where he'll park his car.

FIFTY YEARS OF CONSTIPATION
A Michigan man occupies the pulpit today. He does as I say, and so I am glad to let him say as I do.
Ludington, Mich., 1-19-27.
Dear Sir:—
You are wrong when you call constipation a habit. It is not even a habit. It simply does not exist, except in the imagination. I know whereof I speak. I am 55 years old and have suffered with constipation, (in imagination) since childhood.
When I first read your remarks on constipation, I believed that you were right about most cases but I was sure my case was different. You see, I had reached the stage where I was convinced that nothing could pass through my bowels until it was reduced to a semiliquid state by the use of some kind of cathartic. I was quite sure that if I were placed in a position where I could not obtain a cathartic, I would die a horrible death. Then I came across a statement of yours, to the effect that nothing but a complete obstruction of the intestines could hinder the action of the bowels, and that an interval of a week or 10 days with a bowel passage was not harmful.
Eight months ago I decided to take your word for it and so the last 10 days of my life have still been on my bed room dresser. The lid has not been off it for eight months. The first bowel movement came eight days after banishing the pills. It came naturally and painlessly. Since then the movements have come at irregular intervals of from one to eight days. During this time I have not suffered the least distress in terms, and my usual spells of "bilious headache" and "indigestion" have completely disappeared. I lead an active life, so I did not think it necessary to take to your rolling or somersaulting.
Dr. Brady, you can imagine what this means to me when I tell you that my work requires 16 hours service a day, 365 days in the year. That I perform as much bodily labor in that 16 hours as the average laboring man does in eight hours, and my mind is required to be decidedly on the alert every minute of the 16 hours. Of the balance of the 24 hours each day, I usually spend two of them reading, and the other six sleeping soundly.
You are doing good work, Doctor, and I thank you.
Yours very truly,
I have received scores of similar reports, that is, a considerable number of people have informed me that they have succeeded in recovering from the constipation and phlegm habit just as this Michigan man did and invariably the reports agree that no particular harm or even discomfort comes from the first long wait, whether it be two days or ten.
Were it only constipation, I wouldn't waste space talking about it. Constipation is a trifle of no particular importance as far as health may be concerned. It is the honestly phlegm and various ailments which people with morbid obsessions about the effects of constipation resort to, that do incalculable harm, and I am trying to exhort such people to free themselves.
QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS
Let Plump Enough Alone
Please send me directions for reducing. I am 5 feet tall, weigh 125 pounds, 27 years old, health excellent. I would like to lose 10 pounds. Played golf all summer and fall but never lost an ounce. (Mrs. K. F. B.)
Answer—And may you never lose another. Is the wish of an admirer of nice plump women. Your craving to reduce is abnormal. Your weight is normal. Congratulations, and try the Brady Symphony for that feeling.
Very Dead
Your article about the impossibility of penetrating the skin with foods or medicines prompts me to ask whether ichtylol which physicians prescribe as an application to the leg in case of phlebitis, penetrates the skin? If not, why is it used? (F. M. C.)
Answer—No. Icthyol is a substance obtained from dead fish, which have been dead a long time, fossil fish, in fact. It looks and smells impressive. But . . . it reminds me of the O'Rourke who had just received the "Punch" award. He had something of a switch engine shunting cars. "You may back up, go ahead, you may puff and blow, but you can't vote."

LIBRARY ADVENTURES

JOHN ERSKINE DEFENDS THE MYTH
A queer thing has happened in the publishing world—a good deal as if ultra-modernism in religion should come out and defend the literal truth of the story of Jonah and the whale. John Erskine, author of "The Private Life of Helen of Troy" and "Galahad, Enough of His Life to Explain His Reputation," has come out in defense of the myth and in opposition to the myth-breakers, the people who, like Woodward and Rupert Hughes, have been busy writing and reconstructing the lives of some of the fathers of the Republic.
I had only recently read savage attacks by Lewellyn Powys and others on Erskine because in "Helen" and "Galahad" he had, as they thought, deserted the sacred-myth that millions have learned to love and that were established by some of the greatest minds in the world's literature. They accused Erskine of being the arch-myth-breaker, of having no reverence for the past, of dragging the great figures of ancient poetry down to the level of a 20th century drawing room inhabited by flappers and shoozers.
And in another publication, almost in the same month in which these attacks appeared, John Erskine himself joins the defenders of the myth and launches an attack against the people who violate the ancient sanctities of mythology. His argument in defense of his position pales into insignificance in comparison with the fact that he is found in that camp at all.
It is ably done, as is the case with everything Erskine writes. It is not to be confused with the ignorant protests of "one hundred per centers" who consider a man untrustworthy who doubts the story of Washington and the cherry tree. His main idea is that myth is truer than fact and he holds that those who insist on literal fact miss the essential meaning of the persons whose memories they re-assess in the scientific spirit. Thus the Washington of myth is truer than the real Washington than is the figure re-constructed by the myth-breakers, Erskine declares. The latter may have the fact but the former have the spirit, and a myth acquires authenticity as it goes along; it takes on a life that we may not destroy, the spirit of millions is in it that we do not kill. It is truth that transcends fact.
I am not giving Erskine's thought very clearly because of the necessity for condensation but the above will give a hint of it. It all sounds very plausible, and much more so in Erskine's words than in my own. But I have my doubts in spite of everything, Erskine himself says that we can very well do without the cherry tree story and other stories like them in the lives of the great national figures. But if that is admitted then where is the line to be drawn? When reporters invented the famous dying words of John Quincy Adams, "This is the last of earth, I am content," are we to hold that myth sacred and leave it untouched on the plea that it is truer than fact? And what of all the rest of the mythology? What part of it is sacred and what part not?
Moreover a great deal of the mythology that clusters around the names of the great men and women of history is purely partisan in its origin. The party or the class or the caste in power at the time distorts facts to make them appear to the advantage of the person they wish to exalt. That kind of thing is going on right along; it is going on right now in regard to certain national characters. A man is being given the reputation of greatness in accordance with his politics.
Partisans believe he is great merely because he is of their party and they spread the report of his greatness, dressing up incidents to make their point. In time those myths get themselves accepted as fact. They become more and more sacred as time passes until after a hundred years or more they are holy and are the test of patriotism. What is there that is "truer than truth" in such myths and why should they not become the stuff of the myth-breaker? If a myth contains the goodness of a man's character, by all means respect it even if it is not strictly true to literal fact, but why look upon the more partisanship of a hundred years ago as holy and any more worthy of respect than the partisanship of today?

The Question Box
Q. As a result of the hurricane, has the Gulf Stream come a mile and a half nearer to the coast of Florida? E. P. H.
A. In general, nothing of the kind has happened. It may be that in some places breakwaters, sandbars, etc., have been altered, with corresponding slight local changes in the movement of the water. In general, however, the Gulf Stream is just where it was, and where probably, it has been for ages.
Q. When was Under den Linden built? B. C. E.
A. Under den Linden was begun in the reign of Frederick William (1640-1688), the founder of the Prussian State. The forest once on the site of the avenue was removed and a double row of linden trees was planted, on each side of which gradually arose on the modern street.
Q. What is the difference between a snowstorm and a Wyoming blizzard? A. K.
A. The Weather Bureau says that a blizzard is a very cold, strong to violent wind filled with driving snow. The snow may or may not be falling from clouds above. A snowstorm is just any storm, regardless of the wind velocity and temperature, during which an appreciable amount of snow falls.
Q. When will occur the next total eclipse of the sun, visible in the United States? H. D.
A. The next total eclipse of the sun, which will have a general visibility in the United States will be August 31, 1932. The path is from James Bay, Quebec, across Maine, its duration will be two minutes.
Q. What was the date of the last continual burnt offering made by the Jews in Jerusalem? A. P. M.
A. The last continual burnt offering was probably made by the Jews, A. D. 71, since which time no such offering has been made.
Q. Is there a bird that eats snakes? C. G. L.
A. The Biological Survey says that the secretary bird and the road runner eat snakes and lizards.
Q. When was the Jim Crow law passed in the District of Columbia? M. S.
A. The District never had such a law. Following the emancipation of the slaves, colored people began to ride on the street cars in the fall of 1862. Signs were placed in the cars directing them where to sit. Any action taken by Congress was in individual cases, and was against discrimination instead of in favor of it, until shortly before the close of the Civil War. Congress by special act forbade exclusion from the cars on account of color.
Q. How many different auction bridge hands can be dealt? C. P.
A. E. V. Sheppard says that the 652,013,558,699 different hands that may be dealt may be distributed among four players in 52,084,737,765,483,792,339,440,000 different ways.
Q. What is the disease that can be contracted from wild rabbits? T. B.
A. Tularemia is the disease that is contracted through handling or dressing wild rabbits which have the disease.
Q. Why is it so hot in Death Valley? E. P.
A. The climate of Death Valley, California, is due in a measure to its configuration. It consists of a long narrow parallel valley, considerably below sea level. The Paumotu Mountains shut out from it the moist winds of the Pacific so that in August there is less than one-half of one per cent of moisture in the atmosphere.
Q. Why is Justice pictured as a woman with bandaged eyes? T. B.
A. The portrayal of Justice as a blindfolded figure which is bludgeoned can be traced to the conception of the Egyptian goddess Maat, the personification of physical and moral law, and order and truth. Maat became the personification of justice who awarded to every man his due. Maat was the "lady of the Judgement Hall." Dr. Alfred Wiedemann, professor in the University of Bonn, writing in "Religion of the Ancient Egyptians," says of Maat that this goddess of Truth and Justice, who is mentioned in some of the oldest texts, was occasionally represented with bandaged eyes since Justice judges without respect of persons.
Q. Is the city population larger than the country population? H. S. O.
A. According to the 1920 census, the per cent of urban population is 51.4, rural population, 48.6. The Census Bureau classes all incorporated places with 2500 or more inhabitants as urban.
Q. Did Sweden ever establish a colony in America? P. H.
A. Sweden established a colony in Delaware as early as 1638. They erected a fort on Christiana Creek and name county New Sweden. They subsequently established a military post on the island of Tinian below Philadelphia.

See-Sawing On Broadway
By Gilbert Swan
New York—Somewhere just upstairs is death!
From the inside of an open stairway a wind-whipped streamer of crepe slaps a black end out into the typical Manhattan sidewalk throng as it bustles along Eighth avenue.
There is not even a door on which to place the crepe. It cannot be hung outside the doorway because of the signs. There is a printer's sign and a poolroom sign and a coffee shop sign one above the other. So the crepe had to be placed just above the first step of the stairway.
Overhead there is a huge electric sign of print shop and poolroom. On one side of the open stairway is a bar-resturant, on the other a dinky coffee shop. On the second floor are the huge windows of the print shop. And on the two top floors are transient rooms.
There are no curtains at the window. None is needed. The dust and dirt of the street have coated them so heavily they no longer are transparent.
And dirt and curtains make little difference. The room is a transient. No one stays long. One can get a room for 50 cents, perhaps, those whose heels have been completely run down by the city and whose shoes sole are gone drift in here out of the night.
One such has died. But who cared enough to make the gesture of crepe upon the open stairway?
They are building a subway just outside the doorway. The neck of a giant crane swings over and seems to peer into one of the upper windows as though to solve the death mystery.
Workers at noon hour sit in the doorway and the wind-flits the crepe in their faces. They shove it away without noticing.
Hundreds, thousands, now tens of thousands pass and none notices.
Mid-Manhattan cannot stop to notice such things.
Yet someone knew, or else there would be no crepe; nothing but the Potter's field.
Yet I remember last summer when the windows of these barren rooms opened and one could see inside, that two old ladies came to share one of the dismal, barren rooms.
I remember going to the office window, and staring across the street at the muddled bed and bare walls and marveling at the suggestion of complete desolation and loneliness. Rather, said I, I would be alone upon a desert plain, caught by some millions. I remember one afternoon seeing a scraggly geranium placed in the window to catch dust and dirt.
I wondered what the two old women were doing here. I wonder now if they lived there all this time through the summer and into the winter, alone, caught by some millions in a mid-town, dingy room. Two old women who looked from the distance like kindly grandmas putting about. Somehow I have the notion that one of them, as alone in that room, now facing the rest of the winter, Alone now and amid millions. And nobody will know. Not even I.

QUEER QUIRKS OF NATURE
BY ARTHUR N. PACK
President, American Nature Ass'n.
Wouldn't it be great when one went swimming to be able to shut up one's nose and ears as the hippopotamus does when under water?
The hippopotamus is, with the exception of the elephant, the largest existing land mammal. It sometimes reaches a length of 14 feet, a height of five feet or more and weighs up to four tons. It cannot be said to be a thick-skinned or sensitive creature, for on its sides and back is one and one-half inches thick.
Although it is popularly called "water horse" it is really related to the pig family. Another queer quirk about this animal is that when excited or in pain its body is covered with a red sweat which has given rise to the erroneous belief that it sweats drops of blood.
Equatorial Africa is the only region now inhabited by the hippopotamus, although formerly it was plentiful in Egypt and is thought at one time to have flourished in the Valley of the Jordan.
The baby hippopotamus shown in the accompanying picture is one of the most popular residents of the national Zoo.

PANSIES IN LOCAL GARDEN INDICATE SPRING ISN'T FAR

Robins and bluebirds, straw hats and other summer signs have been seen quite frequently in Appleton, but two pansies in the garden of Joseph Grishaber, 1216 S. NEED MORE TIME TO TEST DRY ACT, INGLER SAYS

There is no reason to feel uneasy because prohibition is not more effective after six years, because other great happenings of history took from 50 to 500 years to materialize. Professor F. M. Ingler of Lawrence college told the Kiwanis club at the regular meeting Wednesday noon at Hotel Northern. Prof. Ingler spoke on Social Progress.

Going back to the period before Christ, Prof. Ingler pointed out that it took 500 years to get people to cease worshipping idols. It took 50 years to abolish slavery, and it took 75 years after the constitution was formed before it was a reality.

At a meeting of the club directors $25 was voted to the Appleton Scout council.

CATLIN WRITES ARTICLE IN WISCONSIN MAGAZINE

An article by Mark Catlin, Appleton attorney and sportsman, on "Dells of the Wolf River, a Patch of Paradise," appears in the March issue of the Wisconsin Magazine, out this week. The article is almost four columns long and is illustrated with photographs of Keshena Falls, Bib Eddy, Shot Gun Eddy, Wayka Rips, White Rapids, Five Islands, Smoky Falls, Otter Slides, Dells, Burnt Shanty Rips and Sullivan Falls.

Another story on "Wisconsin in Industry the Story of Paper and Pulp" by J. H. Alexander, the secretary of the Wisconsin Manufacturers' association, is headed by a large picture of the Fox River Paper Co. mills. The story traces the establishment and growth of the paper and pulp industry from Bradner Smith of Appleton in 1871 and mentions the dandy roll, a device for water making bond paper, which is made here by the J. FORD HAS SLIGHT LEAD IN NEW REGISTRATIONS

More new car registrations were issued to Fords in Wisconsin last month than to any other make of car. Chevrolet was a close second however. Of 4,271 new registrations issued last month, 1,071 were for Fords and 1,011 were for Chevrolets. Buicks with 332, Essex with 313 and Nash with 207 were next in line.

In Outagamie-co-54 new car registrations were made. Of this number 19 were for Fords, 11 for Chevrolets, 6 each for Chrysler and Essex and the balance scattered among several other makes. Milwaukee-co had the largest number of new registrations with 1,252. Dane-co was next with 320. Of all counties in the state, 17 had more registrations than Outagamie and 53 had less. Not a single new registration was issued in Bayfield-co.

A total of 550 trucks were sold in the state during the last month. Ford led with 285 and Chevrolet was second with 118. Only three new trucks were registered in Outagamie-co.

2 $500 FELLOWSHIPS ARE AWARDED TO U. W.

Madison—(AP)—Two $500 fellowships to be awarded graduate students preparing for the teaching of German have been given by the University of Wisconsin by the Seminary Endowment association of New York city. The fellowships each pay railway fare from and to the incumbent's home in addition to the $500 stipend. One is to be known as the Ferdinand V. Lafrenz fellowship, after the donor, a resident of New York city, and the other as the Seminary Endowment fellowship.

The Seminary Endowment association is an organization of New York friends of the old National Teachers' seminary of Milwaukee, which recently transferred $45,000 of its funds to the University of Wisconsin, and which in time probably will settle its entire endowment upon the university as a fund to be used in the training of teachers in German.

SCHOOL PICTURE, LOST IN 1921, IS FOUND THIS WEEK

A lost gift was found in the attic of the Appleton high school building this week after a six years search. In September, 1921, the Appleton branch of the Woman's Christian Temperance union presented the school with a picture of Frances Willard, founder of the organization. It disappeared before it was hung. Members of the union and high school authorities looked for the picture at various times, but it couldn't be found. While in the attic of the school on another mission this week, H. H. Heblie, principal, found the picture. It has been hung in Miss Esther Graef's classroom.

Jell Desserts Three Times a Week

It is said that on the average American families now serve gelatine desserts three times a week. Many use gelatine products in some form every day as dessert, salad, garnish or with roasts. The latest prepared gelatine product is called Sunlite-Jell, and comes in six flavors—lemon, orange, cherry, raspberry, strawberry and mint for salads, roasts and garnish. Your grocer has Sunlite or can get it.

Guarantees "Allenrhu" to Ease Rheumatic Pains and Help Reduce Swollen Joints

Money Back Says Schlitz Bros. Co. If One Bottle of "Allenrhu" Doesn't Make Any Rheumatic Sufferer Rejoice

It does not matter whether you are disabled with cursed Rheumatism or have only occasional twinges "Allenrhu" will ease the agony, do away with the gnawing pains and often reduce the swollen joints. Allenrhu is no lagard. It starts right in at once searching out the poisonous deposits and in two days starts to drive the concentrated impurities that often cause Rheumatism, out of the body thru the natural channels. Allenrhu has been tried and tested for years and really marvelous results have been accomplished often in the most severe cases where the suffering and agony was intense and pitious and where the sufferer was almost helpless. Small Brimless Hats To Be Succeeded By Huge Mushroom Bonnets; Tresses Bound To Return With The Appearance Of Feminine Attire

BY HENRI BENDEL
NEW YORK—Let us look ahead on this somewhat dull morning and preview the summer millinery situation.
Gazing into fashion's glass I see brimless bonnets developing into regular cartwheels, attaining a circumference that is going to make the umbrella look to its laurels.
Not that the large hat will ever dominate the avenue—no, it will be the distinct belonging of the woman of leisure, who spends her summer at a summer resort. The business woman, being clever, will pin her faith to the small, smart hat.
The large hat was very smart this winter at Palm Beach, and will be even more so at Newport and Southampton. It is the correct note with the delicate chiffon, lace or organdie blouse.

Whenever the subject of millinery comes up, it brings with it the matter of hair dressing. And here let me say that among the smart set—perhaps I should say the leisure set that will have need for the very large hat—longer hair is certainly gaining prestige. Tresses seem bound to come with the return of very feminine attire, for the boyish bob belongs definitely to the boyish vogue—which is on the wane.
With hats as large as the summer will bring, more hair is almost imperative. While I foresee no return to puffs, braids, or snooders, or any of the extreme headresses of a decade or so ago, I do believe that the difficulty presented by the back of the bobbed head will force some women back to hair long enough to roll at the nape of the neck, thus getting away from the unwholesome of the badly clipped, too often masculine line in the back.
Fashion has become so much less tyrannical and autocratic than she was before women asserted themselves. I believe she can never make long hair a fashioned necessity, and will favor, as well as extraordinarily becoming, and they will not give it up for the sake of millinery or frills.
Two typical hats for summer are photographed today. Both are huge, mushroom-like and make soft graceful frames for the woman who is tall and wears such extreme styles.
The one above is a chiffon model, the upper part being of figured chiffon and the facing of salmon pink which sheds a flattering glow over the features.
Below is a straw model of rose pink with a millinery call "bite" in the front of the brim which is really only a heart-shaped cut which relieves what would otherwise be a straight and sometimes uninteresting line. At the side, flattened against the crown, are carnations made of rose pink and deep red feathers.
Many crowns are dented or pleated, after the manner of the new small straw hats, and the only trimming is a band of ribbon. The crown must fit just as perfectly as that of the small hat, and must be about as deep.
Large hats are really kind only to the tall and slender, and usually only to the youthful, so they have a limited appeal.

CONCEALED FULLNESS
The production of several seasons ago that was called "fullness" has returned to fatter figures has been disapproved. Most of the French couturiers, while favoring fullness, so contrive the lines of their frocks that the bodies and hips fit closely, and the pleats or gathers appear suddenly, well below the hip line.
Flounces set almost as low as the knees give a charming Spanish effect and create a graceful line in the dance. A lace ruffle or line of fringe adds further sweep.

WOMEN ADMITTED
Women has broken down the barrier that kept her out of certain seats in the principal theaters of France, the government subsidized Comedie-Francaise. Edouard Herriot, minister of public instruction in France, has given her a seat in the "parterre" or back rows of the orchestra floor, the seats where the French theater goer figures he gets the most for his money.
Tradition, dating from the days when the parterre was considered the roughest part of the theater, barred women from seats there. Formerly spectators brought their lunch and wine to the parterre and expressed their opinions freely, regardless of their neighbors.

SAINT AND SINNER

By Anne Austin

But asking Charles, Kelly, Neff, partner of Ralph Cluny, who had been murdered and for whose murder Cherry Lane Wiley had been indicted, for information in regard to the mysterious blackmail letter which Bob Hathaway had taken from his uncle's letter files proved to be an almost impossible undertaking.
Friday morning's papers carried the news that Mr. Neff was seriously ill at a private hospital, following a sudden attack of appendicitis.
"He may die," Bob told Faith over the phone. "And even if he gets well enough to receive visitors, Churchill is very much afraid that he will refuse him an interview. The two men are ancient enemies, rivals. He would not willingly do anything to further the cause of the defense unless he has a rare sense of justice, which I doubt."
"Can't you get a court order of some sort compelling the executors of the estate to let you look at your uncle's letter files? I've been thinking nearly all night, and it seems to me that common, ordinary justice would grant that," Faith insisted.
"Neff is one of the executors, Alexander Cluny is the other," Bob pointed out. "Both are violently antagonistic to Cherry, both believe that she killed Uncle Ralph for his money. But Churchill is putting a private detective on that letter, to search the county court records and the prison records. He'll nail the writer, if possible, even though he hasn't a great deal of faith in the letter as a clue. Are you going to see Cherry today? It's visitors' day, isn't it?"
"Yes," Faith answered. "But Churchill wants to see me before I see Cherry. I'm going over there now. You mustn't give all your time to the case, darling," she remembered suddenly. "You're an architect, dear, not just—a detective."
"There is nothing in the word so important to me now as this case," Bob answered almost curtly.
But Faith, on her way to Churchill's office, did worry about the man she was engaged to. He was devoted practically all of his time to her and to Cherry's case. And he was putting up everything he had in the world to defend Cherry against the charge of murdering his own uncle.
She found Churchill extremely busy, and as usual almost invisible in a fog of smoke.
"Just got a minute," he barked at her. "Wanted to tell you to fix Cherry up with some mourning clothes. Dearest mourning."
"Mourning?" Faith faltered. "Mother wouldn't want Cherry or me to wear black for her. She took such joy in Cherry's beauty."
"That's the point," Churchill snapped. "Cherry'll look more beautiful in black. Get her into plain but expensive black things just as quick as possible. Smart things, but things that look simple and inexpensive. Interiors are taking cracks at her now for not wearing mourning. And when she goes to trial, she's got to play up to the jury. I'll coach her in court-room behavior later, but you've got to get her clothes lined up. And by the way—skirts not too short, but short enough to show those pretty legs of hers. She's got to look like a sweet, modest, old-fashioned little girl that couldn't commit a murder to save her life. Get me?"
"Yes," Faith nodded, swallowing at the lump of misery and disgust in her throat. "I'll—I'll talk with Cherry about clothes this afternoon."
"TOMORROW," Cherry stops thinking of herself alone.
STUDY AT HOME
Girls seeking musical careers should not rush off to a metropolis for instruction, is the latest advice given by Madame Schumann-Heink, who in her tour of the South is passing judgment on the voices of numerous would-be opera singers. "They should get their preliminary training at home," she says. "There are too many inferior voices blocking the traffic now for those with real talent."

OLDER PEOPLE WORSE THAN FLAPPERS

BY OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

THE younger generation against Thomas Edison says. "It is better that those youngsters who do not wish to work because nobody has proved to them that work is fun should spend their time at sports than that they should idle or do worse." By "worse" he explains that he means dissipation.
And then, glory be, the dear gentleman goes on to say that dissipation was much more common among men of bygone generations than it is among the young men of today.
And furthermore he says that a good deal of unjust criticism is being aimed at the girl of today, and that people say she is paying too much attention to dress. Personally he sees no evidence of that. He says the dress of girls is becoming simpler and more beautiful.
"And He also says: 'Why criticize our flappers? They're all right. Let them alone.' And he explains that a wave of complaint is sweeping over Europe and America. Besides, youth can scarcely be guilty of anything more foolish than some of the performances of 'ripe maturity,' says he.
A college girl said to a couple of women, who were discussing drinking among the younger set of high school and college age within her hearing: "Why, when we want to go some place to dance, we generally try to pick out a place where the old married folks aren't all drunk and acting like idiots."
It spilled out so frankly and spontaneously that the flappers were forced to believe what she said.
"Can it be possible?" they cried. "Just put on your hats and I'll get the car and a couple of the boys and we'll take you to a bunch of places that will open your eyes," she said. "They're supposed to be all right places, too. If we college girls know anything we shouldn't, we have the older people to thank."
I'm happy to hear Mr. Edison championing the "younger generation."

SHUN WILES OF SEX IN PUBLIC LIFE

Don't carry flapperism or clinging vine tactics into public life, Miss Isabel Larwill, Michigan's new commissioner of labor and industry, advises those of her sex who have an urge for politics. Miss Larwill, second woman labor commissioner in the country, says women must succeed in affairs of state by intelligence and not by using feminine wiles to play on chivalry for preferment. She has been in politics for many years.

HARD ON BAKERIES
Fasting ladies of fashion are hard on the bakeries of Austria. Vienna rolls, pies and cake are off the menu of women who are courting the boyish figure with the result that four bakeries in Vienna alone have already been forced to close and there is a general falling off in business. It is estimated that nearly a quarter of a million women in Vienna alone have eliminated bread and pastry from their diet in an effort to better their figures.

Love Letters Of The Great

AS COMPILED BY DIANA RICE

HONORE DE BALZAC—1799-1850

Admirers and critics of Honore de Balzac have ever disagreed about the women who are said to have influenced the life of this greatest of story-tellers. And the man who said "do not ask the world to admire you lest it turn its magnifying glass on you" would doubtless be the last one to submit patiently to that same magnifying glass. His letters to Madame Hanska, the daughter of a Russian nobleman and the woman whom he married after the death of her husband, cover a period of thirteen years and a wide range of human emotions. It is impossible for the most generous minded person not to trace a great devotion through these early records, which fill a good-sized volume. Two other women, at least, besides Madame Hanska, very materially helped Balzac in his career.

Paris, February 15, 1834.
My adored, my darling minette, I tell you things that are terrifying but do not be alarmed. Vienna is traced out before me; all will be well. Your desire to see me, your love, all you hovers above me. I believe in you early; I want new successes, new fame, new courage; I will in short, that you shall be a thousand times prouder of your husband of love than of your lover. Yes, dear celestial Eva, I am melancholy because I am here and you are down there, but I have no more discouragements, no more depressions. When I close my eyes I see something better than God. I see a sure happiness, a tried happiness. X x x x x Who will ever know what the road to Ferny is at the spot where, having to leave on the morrow, I stood still at the sight of your dear, saddened face. Mon Dieu if I tried to tell you all the thoughts there are in my soul, the voluptuous pleasures which my heart contains and desires, I should never cease writing, and unfortunately, the word "Vienna" is there. I am cruel to both of us, the name of a continued happiness; yes, one year passed together will prove to you that you can be better loved each day, and I aspire to September.

BALZAC TO MADAME HANSKA

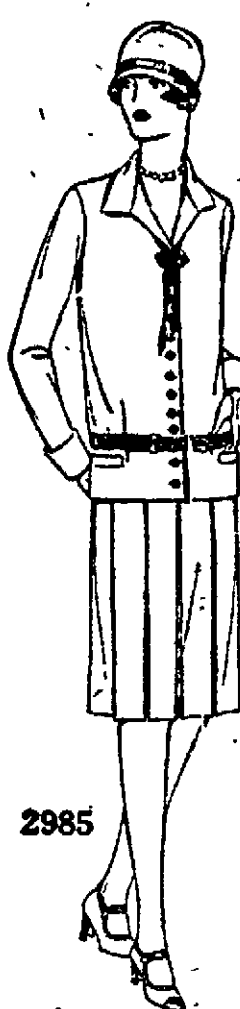

January, 1833.
I entreat you to separate the author entirely from the man, and to believe in the sincerity of the sentiments which I have had to express vaguely in the correspondence you have obliged me to carry on with you. If you are kind enough to excuse the folly of a youthful heart and of an imagination quite unsullied, I will confess to you that you have been to me the object of the sweetest dreams. It pleases me to include you amongst the remains, nearly always unfortunate, of a scattered people, a people found only here and there on earth, perhaps exiled from Heaven. . . . Poetry, music, and religion are their three divinities, their dominating passions, each of which awakens in their hearts equally powerful sensations. So I have clothed you with all these ideas, and have stretched forth my hand to you fraternally from afar, without foppishness as well as without sentimental foolery, but with a confidence, almost domestic, with conscientiousness; and if you had only gazed upon my face, you might have traced there at the same time the lover's gratitude and the heart's religion—the true tenderness that binds the son to the mother and the brother to the sister, all the respect of the young man for the woman and the delightful anticipation of a long and fervent friendship.

Frapses, near Issoudun.

Feb. 10, 1838.

Do you play the coquette about your thirty-third anniversary; you know well, that I think about the age of women, and if you want me to give you new editions of it, I shall think you very greedy of compliments. There are women who will always be young, and you are one of them; youth comes from the soul. Never lose that innocent gaiety which is one of your greatest charms; it makes you able to think aloud to every one, and that will keep you young a long time. In spite of what you say, there are, I think, few clouds above the lake of your thoughts, but always the infinite blue skies.

READ THE STORY, THEN COLOR THE PICTURE

POOR Clowny hung tight to the moon, and then his arms grew tired right soon. Ol Mister Moon Man looked at him and said, "Well who are you?" to hear the Moon Man talk was queer, and Clowny really shook with fear. And then he said, "I'm Clowny. Can you tell me what to do?"
The Moon Man said, "Just cling to me, and you're as safe as you can be. But, tell me, how'd you get up here, and whether are you bound? To cling to me takes lots of gall, but don't let go, or you will fall. And, if you do, I'm sure you'll find, it's hard down on the ground."

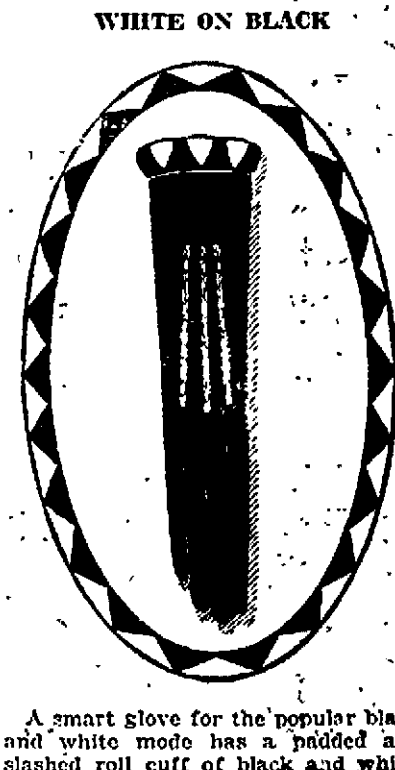

"Oh, I was on a cloud of smoke. It drifted here, and then it broke, and I fell right in. I had to save myself, and so I grabbed a hold of you, the only thing that I could do. At first I really thought that I was clinging to a shelf."
And then the Moon Man said, "Don't fret. Just hang on tight. We'll save you 'yat." Soon Clowny heard him loudly call the Smoke Man far away. "Come here and get this Tiny-mite before he falls down out of sight. I fear his arms are growing stiff, and soon may give away."
The Smoke Man acted quick, of course, and promptly figured out a way of getting away. He took a puff back with all the Tinymites. He quickly filled his mouth with smoke and spread it out just like a cloud. It floated through the air and made the prettiest of sights.

To watch the smoke was quite a treat. It drifted over near Clowny's feet, and then the little fellow jumped and landed safe and sound. He scampered cross the great smoke puff, well satisfied he'd had enough. Then, as he reached the others they all shouted, "Clowny's found!"

(The Smoke Man pulls a neat trick in the next story.)

Women's Safety
from loss of charm under trying hygienic conditions secure this way. True protection—discards like tissue

By ELLEN J. BUCKLAND
Registered Nurse

SCORES of women's disorders are traced today largely to old-time "sanitary pads," insecure and unsanitary.

Eight in 10 better-class women today employ "KOTEX."

Wear lightest gowns and frocks without a second thought, any day, anywhere.

Discards as easily as a piece of tissue. No laundry. No bother.

Five times as absorbent as ordinary cotton pads!

Deodorizes. Ends all fear of offending.

You get it at any drug or department store simply by saying "KOTEX." Be sure you get the genuine. Only Kotex itself is "like" Kotex. No embarrassment.

In fairness to yourself, try this new way. 12 in a package.

Says He Got No Pleasure Out Of Taking Trips In His Machine

Prominent retired Appleton business man suffered continually with backaches for three years.

Tells of Wonderful Relief Brought by Drecto

Mr. Fred Wolter, a prominent retired business man with a fine apartment at 67 Belaire Court, this city, says:

"For three years my kidneys were so deranged that I was compelled to get up often during the night to relieve them and during the day I suffered almost constantly from severe pains in my back. Even riding in my machine was torture to me and I could get no enjoyment out of making pleasure trips as other people did."

"Although nothing else had helped me I decided to give Drecto a chance when I heard so many others praising it. Now I am convinced it is the best investment I ever made for I am completely free of all the pains in my back and my kidneys have been so strengthened I sleep soundly the whole night thru. Drecto also helped my appetite, enabled me to regain lost weight and built me up in general. I am now happy to praise it thru the newspapers for I believe it is by far the best medicine ever brought to Appleton."

All the claims for what Drecto has done in such cases as this are based upon the very best evidence in the world—the signed statements of men and women who tell how they or someone dear to them has been restored to health and the joys of living through its powers.

Mr. H. W. C. Marr Baker, well-known Expert from the Drecto Laboratories near Schellitz Bros. Downtown Drug Store is feeling scores of people every day how to take Drecto for best results. Go to see him.

FILM COCKTAIL IS "WEST OF BROADWAY"

How to mix golf and cattle punching into a delightful cocktail of thrilling melodrama, spiced with humor, was the task Priscilla Dean set for herself in her new Metropolitan star picture, "West of Broadway," which will be offered at Fischers Appleton Theatre for 3 days, beginning today.

These are the ingredients Priscilla used with exceptional results: One villain, known as Walter Long, whose hobby is cattle rustling; a hero, dashing played by Arnold Gray; a club, and when her sex is revealed to the woman-hater, interesting developments ensue.

PLENTY OF ACTION IN "30 BELOW ZERO" LATEST FOX FILM

"30 Below Zero," Fox Films latest release starring the famed Westerner, Buck Jones, will be shown at the New Bijou today and Saturday.

In this story of the wild adventures of a wild young man, there is plenty of action as the result of a very interesting plot. The scenes are laid in the wilds of Broadway and the wilds of the north winter. The love interest is very pronounced and some of the stunts performed by Buck are of the kind to make an audience grip their seats. An outstanding feature of the production, however, are the many humorous situations in which the star becomes involved. Laughs, good and hearty, are a happy feature of this comedy drama, whose feminine lead is Eva Novak. The cast is unusually strong and includes Paul Panzer, E. J. Ratcliffe, Frank Butler, Harry Woods, Fred Walton, Henry Murdock and Vincent Howard.

Must Dress Well To Win Success, Levitan Avers

Milwaukee, Wis., (AP)—The best substitute for good looks is good clothes, in the opinion of Sol Levitan, state treasurer.

Speaking before the joint meeting of the Wisconsin Retail Clothiers and Mens Apparel Clubs last night, Mr. Levitan recalled the time when a $10 suit would "make you look like a dude" while one costing twice that amount now "makes you look like a tramp."

"Good clothes have come to take an increasingly important part in our life," continued Mr. Levitan. "In this day when every man must be a salesman for himself, good clothes have become as important an ally as personality. We are all of us dressing better and facing our daily battles with greater confidence because of the better clothes we have been educated to wear. And we are, I believe, happier, more comfortable and get more enjoyment out of life because of it."

"One thing we have learned is that the well dressed man is not conspicuous. We do not notice his clothes, but only know that he looks well."

EXPRESS PERSONALITY

"Clothes, moreover, are an expression of the personality of the man who wears them. The man who wears a loud checked suit is pretty liable to be loud himself and a flash in the pan. There are others who by their clothes inspire both confidence and respect."

"It is now over 44 years since I first engaged in the clothing business in this state—in the days when I used to carry my store on my back. I have watched with interest the changes that have taken place within the men's clothing business. I can remember the day when I could buy a suit for $10 and look like a dude. Today a suit for $20 may make you look like a tramp."

"The clothing business today is having to meet a good deal of cheap competition. It will take advertising to prove to the buying public that they cannot expect something for nothing. Of course, there are always some folks who expect that. They are the kind who invest their hard earned money in trick oil wells, fake mining stock and bogus bonds. They are the ones who go to a cheap store and expect to get a good suit at a price which only the manufacturer of shoddy garments can produce. Then when the suit pulls out of shape, doesn't keep its press and begins to go to pieces, they damn the whole clothing industry when they have only themselves to blame."

ORANGE AND LAWRENCE FIVES IN IMPORTANT BATTLES

Blues Are Last Barrier In Way Of Ripon Quint's Conference Title Hopes

Crippled Shieldsmen Must Beat West Bays for Chance at Loop Banner

FRIDAY GAMES
APPLETON AT WEST GREEN BAY.
 East Green Bay at Shioyan.
 Fond du Lac at Oshkosh.
 Non-Conference
 Menominee at Marinette.
 Two Rivers at Manitowoc.
 Neenah at Appleton (Saturday).

Two Appleton cage fives will engage in crucial battles Friday evening, games which will mean as much as any title of the season to the local teams. Appleton high school's Orange youths will travel to Green Bay to play West high in the game that will decide whether the Orange men can tie for the Valley conference title and Lawrence college's tough luck team will play Ripon to decide whether the Reds shall take their first W-I conference title in six years or whether Carroll still will have a chance for a title. Meanwhile Carroll will be playing a W-I game with Lake Forest at Lake Forest.

Saturday evening games of local interest are two. Carleton's unbeaten Midwest five clashes with Coe at Cedar Rapids in a first place battle and Neenah high school, which defeated the Orange at Neenah recently, playing here. Coe has a good chance of whipping Carleton on the home floor to tie for the conference lead. Friday evening Lake Forest, which has won the last six games, including the only defeat for Ripon's loop leaders, has a chance of beating Carroll at home, thus clinching the banner for Ripon, whether the Reds win or lose here.

Appleton enters the West high game without the services of Laird, regular center, and with the Purple favored to win at home because of that fact. A loss means the loss of a tie for the loop, but the Orange, while a win will give it a chance for a double tie with Manitowoc or a triple knot with the Ships and Fondy, should Fondy lose to Manitowoc or Shioyan.

NEENAH HERE SATURDAY
 Saturday's game is the renewal of an ancient rivalry. The Neenah men played great ball to whip Appleton by a basket at Neenah after riling up a large first half lead. Appleton had played Shioyan of its feet to win an overtime game at Shioyan the evening before and then had ridden throughout the day of the Neenah game. It showed the effects in the battle. The same is true this week with a hard battle with West coming Friday, though the Saturday game is played here. Neenah will have a big advantage in playing tired five minus a regular center.

MC'COY LEADS NEENAH YOUTH IN CUE MEET

D. McCoy still is leading in the round-robin pocket billiard tournament at the Pine and Reineke billiard hall, though he is hard pressed by S. Bunker of Neenah, who is just one game behind. All of the games of the meet are hard-fought and interesting. The public is invited to see the matches and no admission is charged.

The meet will be concluded in the next ten days on the new national tourney tables such as Harold Plinde, state champion, played on in Philadelphia recently in the national title match. Use of the table with the new balls makes the game harder and more interesting, it is said.

Evans Questions Whether McGraw Is Loser On Deals

BY BILLY EVANS
 As managers go, John McGraw is the "big shot" of the National League. No other manager in the history of that organization can boast a record that even approaches his.

Connie Mack is the only American League pilot who ranks with McGraw as a consistent winner over a long period of years.

While fandom has a keen appreciation of his remarkable ability, McGraw certainly has them appraising as a result of his trading activities of the past winter.

Frankie Frisch for Rogers Hornsby was the first surprise McGraw handed the boys who pay the way, while number two came shortly afterwards when he parted with George Kelly for Ed Roush.

What can McGraw be thinking about? That has been an oft repeated query since the leader of the Giants put over those two deals.

Naturally that would lead one to infer that the fans were of the opinion that McGraw had definitely the worst of the transaction. Time alone will answer that question.

It is not my intention to second guess either deal. I have too high an opinion of John McGraw's judgment to believe that he took the worst of the proposition. He seldom does.

There is one thing that I have always liked about McGraw, the fact that he has the courage of his convictions. He is ever ready to fall or stand on his judgment. He asks no one to shoulder the blame for failures and never spends any time thinking up alibis.

Therefore I am going to attempt to figure certain reasons why McGraw made the trades he did, working on the theory that he got at least a 50-50 break on the proposition.

First, let us consider the Frisch-Hornsby deal. The general impression is that Frisch is a much younger man and, therefore, a better gamble as to length of service. That is out, for Hornsby is only two years older.

Two years ago John McGraw told me he regarded Frankie Frisch as the greatest ball player in the National League, if not in the majors.

That was before Frisch took leave without permission last season when the Giants were in the thick of the fight. It was my belief that his quitting was the direct cause of his trade to St. Louis.

Since Hornsby was the only other player McGraw would consider, he was able to make a deal, aided by the fact that Hornsby was having trouble over his contract.

McGraw loses a great player in Frisch but gets as good if not a better man in Hornsby.

Frishing no club can get very far without a star center fielder was, no doubt, McGraw's reason for letting the versatile Kelly go to Cincinnati for Red's star, Ed Roush.

McGraw felt he had a player capable of holding down first base in Terry and parting with Kelly made it possible for him to bolster up a weak spot in the outfield.

So the fans who are sympathizing with McGraw because they feel he got the worst of the two trades may be wasting it, as after events will probably prove.

BUD TAYLOR WHIP FEATHER SCRAPER

Banty Champ Goes Out of Class to Beat Shea; Shad Beats Negro

Chicago — (P) — Bud Taylor, the blonde Terre Haute youth, who is recognized as bantamweight champion in Illinois and seventeen other states went into the featherweight class Thursday night to score a decisive ten-round triumph over Eddie Shea, Chicago.

Another Chicagoan, Wolcott Langford, who has been on a recent knock-out rampage took a lesson in fistcraft from the Willow Dave Shad of California. They fought at 160 pounds and Shad during the entire ten rounds was hardly touched by the dusky Langford, who had won his last five starts by knockouts. Twice Shad had Langford on the floor in the second round. Taylor felt a lot of gloves in the early rounds but when he got his fists shooting like busy pistons, Shea wilted. Taylor's title was not at stake. Shea weighing 122½ pounds to Taylor's 119.

POST-CRESCENT FIVE BEATS CHUTE LADIES

The newly-organized Appleton Post-Crescent bowling team opened its season Thursday evening at Little Chute by taking three games from the Dick's Alley Girls on Dick's alleys, winning the match by 124 pins. Koeppke lead the P-C men with a 218 high game and a 560 high series. For the girls, A. Oudenhoven was high with a 201 game and a 489 series. No other 200 games were rolled.

BEAT WALL

Women golfers see in Edith Quier a new threat for national honors. This newcomer to the links gave the women link followers something to think about when she defeated Ed Berline Wall in the first round of the women's golf championship in North Carolina. She failed to win the meet but her play was watched closely.

NEXT WEEK'S GAMES
 Boaters vs Foulers
 Losers vs Jinx
 Crabs vs Dubs

Taking three games from the Dubs by scores of 15-9, 15-5 and 15-11, the Losers further entrenched themselves in first place in the intergymsnasium class volleyball tournament of the Y. M. C. A. Wednesday evening, with only one loss for the season. The second place Jinx team ran into a snag with the lovely Foulers and dropped two games of a match, 6-15, and 10-15 before winning 15-4. The losses enabled the Crabs to creep into a tie for second with the Jinx after trailing a game behind in third and played both teams three full games behind the leading Losers. The Crabs tied the Jinx by whipping the tallied Boaters twice, 15-9, 10-15 and 15-11. The Boaters have won but a single game this year.

Final games in the meet will be played next Wednesday evening and chances that the Losers will clinch the banner are fairly good. The Losers have a three-game lead over all three games of the last match while either of the other two teams are winning all three to even be tied for first. No matter if the Losers drop three games and their closest rival win three the present leaders cannot finish in worse than a first-place tie. The way the losers have been going makes it fairly certain that they will win at least one game of the meet next week, assuring them the banner.

They hit a tough team, however in the second-place Jinx squad, out of for a chance to tie for first. Meanwhile the Crabs are favored to trip the Dubs and also may cut in on the tie. The Boaters and Foulers clash in a collar battle.

After the meet is concluded the teams will vote on the best 24 players. These men will play another tourney of four six-men squads. When this is completed the members of the four teams will vote on the six best men and alternates to form the local association squad for the state meet next month.

Penn State Cage Leader Sets Great Player Mark

State College — There may be a greater college basketball player than Mike Hymas, captain and forward at Penn State, but Penn State followers doubt it.

Here's the record rival claimants can shoot at:

He was a member of the Passaic, (N. J.) high school "wonder five" that won 50 straight games a few years ago without a single defeat in over two years.

In his final year with Passaic, he scored approximately 800 points, an average of almost 27 points per game. In one game that year, he registered 67 points for his outfit.

Then he carried Penn State and in his career here he has figured in but six defeats, two each in his freshman, sophomore and senior years. His victories now total almost 100.

Hymas, who is called "Deadshot," averaged some 14 points per game for

SATURDAY GAMES

Kaukauna "Y" vs Riverside.
 Coated Paper vs Citizens Bank.

Only one game between second division teams probably will be played Saturday evening in the Y. M. C. A. Industrial loop, according to league officials. The Kaukauna Y. M. C. A. probably will play the Riverside Paper team in a battle for fifth place now held by the Kawneer, a half-game above the Riverside. The other game, which would be the feature of the evening if played would bring together the Coated Paper Co. five and the Citizens Bankers tied for third place for the last three weeks and even first place.

However, both teams desire a cancellation of the game and it probably will be granted. Two regulars of the Bank five play in the 1927 intercity championship game of Lawrence college in the afternoon, playing with the Delta Tots against the Theta Phi. The two teams now are tied for first with clean slates. The players are Walter and Carl Voecks. The former is the high scoring ace of the Bankers and the latter is one of the best guards in the loop. The Coated men desire to witness another cage game Saturday evening.

NELSON PINMEN WIN FROM ROYAL QUINTET

Nelson Insurance Co. bowlers took two games of a match with the Royal Five Thursday evening on the Arcade alleys, winning the match by 45 pins. The Royal Five took the first game by 69 pins and then lost the next by 15 and 46 pin lead. In the final game the Royal Five men won by 101 maps to clinch the match.

Perine of the losers has high game of the match, a 223, and Kostzke of the Nelsons had high series of 594. High series for the losers went to C. Tornow with 555 and high game for the winners was scored by W. Kostzke with 213. Other 200 scores were rolled by Jimos and Behnke of the winners and Tornow and Hume of the losers. CORNER CAGERS SWAMP BLACK CREEK QUINTET

With the regular lineup in action once more Bill Melitz's Valley Queen cagers of Twelve Corners piled up a 29-18 victory over the Black Creek city team Wednesday evening at Twelve Corners. The home team lead 11-7 at the half. The game was fast with the Corners boys showing a good eye for the hoop. G. Stringel dropped six baskets and three extra shots for 15 of his team's 29 points. Schmidt garnered three ringers and four free tries. Ed Heiden got two baskets and Erv Roloff added two and four free tries.

The Black Creek seconds beat the Corners crew seconds, 20-10, with half ending 8-5 for the visitors. Next Thursday the Valley Queen five meets Stingles Bakeries of Appleton at the Corners. The Appleton lineup includes C. Stingle, Reetz, Kitzinger, A. Muenster and Zapp.

JOHNNY BUSCH BEATS HENDRICKS IN FIGHT

Joey Thomas of Oshkosh shaded Atkey Andert of St. Paul in the windup battle of the Oshkosh American Legion boxing card Thursday evening at Oshkosh. The battle was a 10-rounder to complete 32 rounds of fighting. Frankie Dory, Marinette shaded J. Young, St. Paul in eight rounds of slow, uninteresting battling in which the men seemed unwilling to mix.

Johnny Busch, Sheboygan, who whipped Washie Hendricks here last year, turned the trick again in six rounds. Hendricks took one sock on the button in the second round for a count of nine and was badly battered when the fight ended. Lots of blood was spilled and at one time Busch was almost out on his feet, saving Hendricks from being knocked out after he had taken a hard blow.

In the second bout J. Beall of Oshkosh beat Ted Algers of New London in four rounds, walloping him all the way and outclassing him badly. In the opener C. Lewis of Oshkosh shaded

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE
From the veranda of the Hotel Majestic, at Ocean Town, N. J., TITUS RIGGS, a guest, sees a man taken from the ocean and laid on the beach while a crowd gathers to assist him.

The reader has been introduced to these bathers:
NED BARRON, the copper king, and his wife, MADELINE; ANGELICA FAIR and her fiancé ROBIN SEAR; ROBIN's father, CROYDON SEAR; CARMELOTTA VALDON and her companion, ROBERT NEVILLE GABRY FOLSON and MRS. BARNABY, whom everyone calls THE DUCHESS.

From the shocked expression on the faces of the throng, Riggs surmises that the man is dead and, putting down the field glasses, he hastens down to the beach to find that the dead man is Garrett Folsom.

At the hotel, where the body is taken, ROSS, the victim's valet, is questioned, and DIXON, hotel detective, decides to examine all of Folsom's companions.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPTER IV
DIXON pushed a button and a bell-boy appeared at the door. "Oh, it's you, Tubby, is it? Well, like yourself up to these two room numbers and ask the two ladies to come down here immediately."

"Yes, sir," and the fat youngster took the slip that Dixon handed him. "Isn't that a little imperative, Mr. Dixon?" said Neville, with a look of astonishment.

"It's the only way. I've tried too many times asking ladies to come when convenient, and it means a long wait. They can't resist a definite summons in an emergency like this."

"No, I suppose not," Neville agreed, and sure enough, it was but a few moments before the two came in.

"Oh, oh!" exclaimed Mrs. Barnaby, as she caught sight of the blanketed form, "can't we go somewhere else? That awful—oh, oh—"

She covered her face with her hands and sat moaning.

"Hush, hush, Duchess," her companion whispered. "Don't make such a fuss."

"I can't help it! Oh, Mr. Pelham, do let us get out of here. Mr. Neville beg him to let me go. I must see!"

She rose and made for the door with such evident determination that Dixon thought best to humor her.

"All right," he said kindly. "We'll go into another room. Come, please, Mrs. Valdon, and you, too, Mr. Neville."

There were several nearby rooms used more or less as a lounge, and as they entered, Dixon ushered his little crowd of people.

Pelham remained behind, waiting for the appearance of the doctor, who had been sent for with an urgent request to make haste.

The whole affair was most distasteful to Mr. Pelham. "If he were a manager could be blamed for having one of his guests drop dead, but it made an unpleasant commotion, and try as he would, it seemed impossible to keep the affair secret."

The bellboys were staring; the elevator attendants were on the alert; the clerks at the desk, though outwardly calm, were wide-eyed and listening.

The news had, of course, spread, and some of the guests in the great foyer were frankly curious, and even beginning to ask questions.

They saw the two women, accompanied by the hotel detective, Elmer Ross, go into a room, and close the door.

Yet the conversation in there was in no way alarming or even interesting. Relieved of the sight of the still, shrouded form of Garrett Folsom, Mrs. Barnaby became herself again and answered readily enough all the questions put to her.

Too readily, indeed, for she was a volatile sort, and once started she loved to hear the sound of her own voice.

"Oh, yes, of course I knew Mr. Folsom," she returned to Dixon's question. "No, I didn't know him until last evening, but, you see, he's the kind of man you feel acquainted with at once. My friend Mrs. Valdon introduced him to me, and I took to him that very minute. A delightful man—oh, what a pity he is gone!"

"Then, if you never knew Mr. Folsom until last evening, you can't tell me much about him," Dixon said, a little curiously. "Mrs. Valdon, you have known him for a longer time?"

"Yes," Carmelita Valdon replied, her great dark eyes filling with tears. "I have known Mr. Folsom for several years. He was my lawyer, and my friend as well. I was rejoiced when I heard he was down here, and we planned many things to do by way of entertainment. I knew Mrs. Barnaby would like him, and I was not surprised when I found the liking mutual."

"And you three," Dixon took in the trio, "with Mr. Folsom were the whole of your party to go in bathing this morning?"

"Yes," Mrs. Barnaby said, unable to keep out of the conversation. "And I was so glad I had on my new bathing suit; it just came yesterday. And Mrs. Valdon, too—we were the best-dressed crowd on the beach. Oh, I can't believe he is gone!"

"Who stood next to Mr. Folsom at the rope?" Dixon asked, ignoring the talkative one, "you, Mrs. Valdon?"

"Yes," Carmelita began, but Mrs. Barnaby interrupted.

"Was next but one," she said. "I mean I was next to Carmelita and she was next to Mr. Folsom. But I can tell you what happened, for I was looking right at him."

Clearly, Dixon thought, it was best to let her tell it, as she was far more willing to talk than the others.

"Why, we were all standing there taking the waves," she said, "and laughing, and just after a big breaker passed, Mr. Folsom sort of loosened his grip on the rope and then his hands fell away from the rope and he just sank down under the water. That's all, and everybody seemed to serve me another wave came and then I saw the life guards come and get hold of Mr. Folsom and carry him out of the water up onto the beach. That's all."

"You were next to Mr. Folsom, I believe, Mrs. Valdon," Dixon said turning to Carmelita, "you saw the scene Mrs. Barnaby has just described?"

"Why, yes," was the reply, "that is, I suppose it must have been that way. But I was not looking at him at all. I had all I could do to keep my feet. The surf was very high, and the waves pounded so I paid no attention to anyone else. I just clung to the rope to keep from being knocked down myself. If Mr. Folsom had even a slight cramp it is not surprising he was drawn under by the waves."

"You were off the rope, Mr. Neville?" and Dixon turned to him.

"Yes, I hate to be hanging to a rope. I take the big waves head on, and if they fling me up on the beach, that is the sort of sport I enjoy. Folsom liked it, too, but he felt he must stay with the ladies. He broke away once or twice and then went back."

"Yes, but he was glad to get back," Mrs. Barnaby told them. "He wasn't much used to surf bathing, and he seemed to get winded easily."

"You noticed that, too, Mrs. Valdon?" pursued the questioner.

"Not especially," she said. "But as I told you, I was busy looking out for myself. I think I was never so buffeted by the waves as we were this morning. They were ferocious!"

"Who stood on the other side of Mr. Folsom?" Dixon inquired, and as Neville and Mrs. Barnaby shook their heads, he turned to Mrs. Valdon for a reply.

"It was Mr. Barron," she said. "I know because Mr. Folsom asked me who he was and I leaned over to see. That was just before we decided to come out of the water. We couldn't find Mr. Neville, so we said we'd go out anyway. Then a big wave came, and it was right after that that Mr. Folsom went under."

"Where were you then, Mr. Neville?"

"In the water, not far from our crowd. I saw Mrs. Barnaby's black and yellow cap and she waved her hand toward shore, so I gathered we were all to go in and I started toward the land. But there was a crowd, and before I could get to shore, I saw the men carrying a man in, and I saw at once that it was Folsom."

"The news had, of course, spread, and some of the guests in the great foyer were frankly curious, and even beginning to ask questions."

LITTLE JOE
THE GUY WHO INVENTED
UMBRELLAS MUST HAVE BEEN ALL WET.

"And you followed them?"
"Of course. And stood by until they started to bring him here, then I went to my bathroom and dressed as quickly as I could."

"Well," said Dixon. "I think that's about all you people can tell me, then. I just wanted to get the details of the drowning. Hello, here comes the valet, Ross."

The man came into the room and stood at attention.

Though evidently stirred with excitement, he preserved a calm demeanor, and except for a nervous twitching of his fingers, showed no sign of perturbation.

(To Be Continued)
Ned Barron, who stood next to Folsom, has yet to be questioned. Read the next chapter.

For months he had hated to face it. . . . He was slipping. Losing out. He who once had shown such shining promise! His old-time vigor had gone. Ambition, itself! What had happened? He seemed to grow weary before the day was half-way through!

What curse was befalling his life? Constipation blights many a bright career. It destroys initiative. It weakens the body and leads to disease after disease. Yet, constipation can be relieved—safely, permanently. Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is guaranteed to give relief!

Why part-bran products are ineffective
Doctors recommend ALL-BRAN because it is 100% bran. They know that 100% bran means 100% results! Here is why:

ALL-BRAN carries through the system moisture which its "bulk" absorbs. And it gently distends the intestines—cleansing, removing wastes. ALL-BRAN contains sufficient "bulk" to perform this work—because it is 100% bran. In a part-bran product the quantity of bulk is too small to be entirely effective.

Don't risk dangerous drugs
ALL-BRAN works as nature does. How different from pills and drugs whose doses must be constantly increased.

Serve ALL-BRAN with milk or cream—and add fruits or honey. Let it soak a few moments to bring out its nut-like flavor. Mix it with other cereals. Use it in soups. Try the recipes on every package.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is the original 100% bran. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek. Comes ready to eat. Sold by all grocers. Served by hotels, restaurants. On diners.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is sold with this definite guarantee: Eat it according to directions. If it does not relieve constipation safely, we will refund the purchase price.

DIRECTORS PLAN
THREE COMMERCE
CHAMBER MEETS

Organization to Hold Forum
Meeting March 3 for Golf
Enthusiasts

Plans for three future meetings of the chamber of commerce occupied most of the meeting of chamber directors on Wednesday. The industrial committee was to meet at 4:30 Friday afternoon to make final arrangements for the veteran employees dinner on March 30, the forum meeting for municipal golf enthusiasts will be held on Thursday, March 3, and the annual meeting and election of directors will be held on April 5.

The chamber will cooperate with the graduating class of the Foreman's Safety school in the veterans dinner.

Robert Andrews of Chicago will speak on Municipal Golf as a Community Asset at the forum meeting on March 3. Mr. Andrews is experienced with golf courses, private and municipal. A discussion will follow his talk. Golf enthusiasts of Appleton will be invited and special invitations are being sent to the 200 persons who signed petitions for a municipal course. Reservations should be made at the chamber of commerce office.

Colvin Brown, chief of the organization bureau of the United States Chamber of Commerce will be the speaker at the annual meeting of the local chamber on April 5. Mr. Brown spoke before the Rotary club here about two years ago. Before the meeting a nominating committee will be elected to prepare a list of nominees for directors. Five directors will be elected at the annual session. The retiring directors are President Elmer H. Jennings, Dr. H. K. Pratt, A. A. Wettengel, Charles Boyd and E. A. Peterson.

A letter from the national chamber of commerce announcing the national convention dates as May 2, 4 and 5, was read. The local chamber was asked to send delegates to the sessions.

The directors prepared a letter to be sent to Appleton residents who contribute to various funds collected by outsiders, asking that they send their contributions direct to the chamber rather than pay to the collectors.

It was decided to cooperate with the Onley Johnston post of the American Legion in promoting the state Legion bowling tournament here in March. The chamber will contribute a "Welcome to Appleton, bowlers," advertisement to the Badger Legionaire.

The tax plans outlined by the state committee of which Mayor Daniel Hoan of Milwaukee is chairman, were presented for approval and it was turned over to the chamber legislative committee with power to act.

A. A. Wettengel, chairman of the retail trades committee, reported that the cooperation of Appleton merchants in dollar day was excellent. He also told of the merchants cooperation in Boys' Week in the city and in aiding the 120th Field Artillery Band in its benefit performance of "Mary Lou." The merchants have purchased banners to be used in the flag holes in front of their stores on civic days which are not patriotic holidays. These flags were adopted and purchased by the merchants at the request of the Johnston post.

ASSEMBLY ADVANCES BILL TO TAKE AID FROM SMALL SCHOOLS

Bill Permitting New Method of Fixing School Tuition Is Engrossed

Madison—(AP)—Seven bills were ordered engrossed, one passed, one indefinitely postponed, and two were laid over to the next calendar day during Thursday's session of the assembly.

The bill passed was 58 A, by Assemblyman Husband of Balsam Lake, relating to terms of court in the eleventh judicial district. It was passed unanimously. It passed by the senate. It will have the district court in that district meet on the first Monday in November in Burnett and Polk counties, instead of on the first Monday in October.

Bill 15A by Assemblyman Schmidt, for the interim committee, was indefinitely postponed. It reduced the rate of income tax payment for relative heirs under the income tax law and increased the exemption of widows $2,000 for each child such widow had to support.

There was considerable debate before the bill by Assemblyman Schmidt withholding state aid from schools having an enrollment of less than ten was ordered engrossed. Assemblymen in whose districts there are small schools raised the major objection. A motion for indefinite postponement of the measure was defeated.

Argument was also heard on the proposal, in a bill by Assemblyman Nelson, making the state aid for mothers' pensions "the amount necessary," instead of "one third" of the total amount expended for the assistance of widows, the county paying the other two thirds. An amendment setting the amount of state aid at $100,000 was ready for third reading, after a motion for indefinite postponement was voted down.

The bill by Assemblyman Lawson making the tuition for non-resident high school pupils the result of the division of the costs of teachers salaries and other school expenses by the enrollment of the school, was ordered engrossed with an amendment. Tuition has previously been set at a definite amount.

There were patriotic speeches from several corners of the assembly when the bill by Zink of Beaver Dam, appropriating $1,000 to the American Legion for its annual encampment came up. The proposed amendment, cutting the amount to $500 was denounced and defeated and the bill finally ordered engrossed.

100 PARENTS ATTEND GO TO SCHOOL NIGHT

The "go to school night" held in the third and fourth grades at First ward school Wednesday night was a decided success, parents and teachers agreed. Nearly 100 parents were present to see how their children were taught in school.

Teachers who directed the work were Miss Elsie Ackerman and Miss Edna J. Burwell of the fourth grade, and Miss Olga H. Heller and Miss Nina Amthor of the third grade.

WHO'S THE POOR FISH?
I'm sorry, fish, I cannot toss you back into the treacherous and sobbing whirlpool of life.
I'm sorry, this to hang your cheerless smile upon my seven-dollar fishing line.
No doubt you are a fish of good repute whose honest fame has spread from sea to sea.
How many orphans do you leave behind to sob and suffer on a widow's knee?
I don't like fish, nor do I fish for them.
And yet (though every sting of conscience chide me) I may not CAN, WILL not toss you back.
I want to have you photographed beside me!

LITERARY NOTE
A GERMAN BOOK REVIEWER WHO HAD RECEIVED AN ADVANCE COPY OF THE FORTHCOMING FUN SHOP BOOK WHEN ASKED WHAT HE THOUGHT OF THE BOOK'S CONTENTS, REPLIED: "ACH, IT'S A NUMBER FUN."

WHY NOT?
Dear Mr. Judell:
I was so mad I could have chewed up scrap iron when Mabel's old man asked me to play checkers with him. I had called to see Mabel, not to amuse her father.
About 10:30 Mabel said "good-night." I made a move to go, but the old lady said, "Heck, you never go home till midnight. Stick around and we'll play a couple more games."
There was no way out.
Shortly after 11 a strange, whirring noise startled me.
"Is that a cyclone?" I asked.
"No," said Mabel's father, "that's just Mabel snoring."
I tried to ignore it.
That was my luck day!
—Bernard Cassidy.

Dear M. F. J.:
I got a line on a swell layout that was just waiting for someone to knock it loose. A big house, no burglar alarms, no night watchman, everything soft and easy.
It was a nice night for work, and I was just about ready to cross the yard when I felt a cramp in my leg. I starts to rub it, and what do I see but Dopey George, the double-crossing two-timer, jimmying the very window I was going to budge. I was knocked so cold I couldn't say a word or even draw my rod.

My leg was still pestering me. He must have been inside ten minutes. When he got outside, with a bag of stuff, the cop on the beat spots him, and Dopey throws the swag over the fence and legs it. The cop chases him. The swag falls right in my lap! Soft, eh?
THAT was MY lucky day!
—Chicago Louie.

APPLETON MUSIC LOVERS THRILLED BY ENGLISH GROUP

Unique Program Presented in Lawrence Chapel by Six Artists

An artistic sensation was created by the English Singers of London in their concert at Lawrence Memorial chapel Thursday evening under the auspices of the Community Artist series. They sang an entirely new type of music for the concert stage with an ensemble perfection appreciated by a large audience.

The program was varied and interesting, presenting songs of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries of religious, humorous and love themes. The ensemble singing was done A Cappella, which was suited to the nature of these Elizabethan songs.

The ensemble groups of male and female voices appealed particularly to the audience, but the duet and trio numbers brought much applause. One of the charming and unusual effects of the program was the close following of the musical expression to the meaning implied in the spoken words. When the poem expressed doubt, it was conveyed to the audience, and when it changed to conviction, their meaning was again clear.

A reverent and impressive performance was given in a group of religious songs of the Elizabethan period. The encompassing sympathy of all of their work was incomparable.

Madrigals, ballads, canzonets, motets of the Elizabethan period, old street cries and folk songs were included in their repertoire. They appeared seated informally about a table. The company consisted of Flora Mann, Julie Carson, Lilian Berger, Cuthbert Kelly, Norman Stone and Norman Notley.

BADGER BOY OPPOSES SPANISH HEAVY STAR

New York.—(P)—The only "tiger" in pugilistic captivity ventures forth from his lair Friday night to stalk his first heavyweight victim in the resin dust of Tex Rickard's spacious Madison Square Garden.

Rivaling in color and interest the memorable appearance of Luis Firpo here as a contender will be the entry into the arena of Paulino, wood-demonishing importation from Spain. Against him in a ten round struggle will be pitted the young and powerful midwestern dane, Knute Hansen, Racine, Wis.

So many foreign heavyweight stars have come here with battle reputations that fandom has been skeptical of the prowess of Paulino. Critics who have viewed his training camp workouts declare him to be awkward and lumbering. But they also report that the "Tiger of the Pyrenees" packs a tremendous wallop in both fists and that his bull like rushes will revive memories of the hurricane assault of Firpo on Jack Dempsey.

Hansen made his appearance in Tex Rickard's heavyweight tournament two months ago with a point victory over Monte Munn after having been temporarily sidetracked by a defeat at the hands of the German entry, Franz Diener. Prior to that melee, Hansen scored successive knockouts over Joe Lawson, Alfredo Porzio and Romero Rojas.

COOLIDGE VETOES FARM RELIEF BILL

benefit of particular groups. As a direct tax on certain of the vital necessities of life it represents the most vicious form of taxation. Its real effect is an employment of the coercive powers of government to the end that certain special groups of farmers and producers may profit temporarily at the expense of other farmers and of the community at large.

The message declared the bill economically unsound, since it would be unlikely that surpluses could always be exported.

"Increased production on the one hand, coupled with decreased domestic consumption on the other, would mean an increased exportable surplus to be dumped on the world market," said the president. "This in turn would mean a constantly decreasing world price until the point was reached where the world price was sufficiently low so that, even though increased by our tariff duties commodities would flow into this country in large quantities. The law fixes no standards, imposes no restrictions and requires no regulation of any kind," he said.

MEMBERS UNDER PRESSURE He declared also that members of the federal boards "would be under constant pressure from their constituents to push price as high as possible."

"To expect moderation under these circumstances is to disregard experience," he said, "and credit human nature with qualities it does not possess."

Pointing out that the department of justice had been employed in breaking up combinations aimed at raising the cost of living, the message continued:

"This bill, if it accomplishes its purpose, will raise the price of the specified agricultural commodities to the highest possible point, and in doing so, the board will operate without any restraint imposed by the antitrust laws. The granting of any such power to a government board is to run counter to our traditions, the philosophy of our government and the spirit of our institutions, and all principles of equity. The administration difficulties involved are sufficient to wreck the plan."

STOCK MARKET HAS IRREGULAR TREND

Extensive Readjustment of Speculative Accounts Is Expected

New York.—(P)—Further irregularity developed at the opening of Friday's stock market. American Car and Foundry, Allied Chemical, Stock trucks, DuPont and all-American Cables showed early gains of a point or more, the last named touching a new high on the announcement of details of the proposed merger with the International Telephone and Telegraph Company. Houston Oil yielded a point on the first sale.

Extensive readjustment of speculative accounts was regarded as natural after more than four weeks of almost steadily rising prices. Maintenance of the 4 per cent rediscount rate by the New York Federal Reserve bank occasioned little surprise, as hopes of an early reduction were practically abandoned two weeks ago.

Crude oil advanced 1/4 cent to 12 1/2 cents, the price of a new steel hardening process, while U. S. Steel Common lost ground, similar to the decline in the steel industry. Signal were depressed at least two points below yesterday's final quotation. Wheat advanced 1/4 cent to 1 1/2 cents, being bid up nearly three points.

SHARES FAIRLY FIRM
Oil shares held fairly firm on the announcement of an agreement to merge production in the new Sempron oil field, the over production in which is generally believed to be responsible for the recent swooning of crude oil prices. Houston Oil, after sagging over a point to par, rallied to a new high of 12 1/2 cents on the announcement of a court decision in its favor. Comstock Solvents B quickly broke 4 points and Loews and International Telephone encountered further profit-taking. Foreign exchange held steady, with demand sterling quoted around $4.87 1/2 and French francs around 200 1/2 cents.

Various stocks which command a big public following were taken in round amounts in the forenoon, including several of the motor, food, service and public utility issues. General Motors reached 127 1/2, placing it within a half above U. S. Steel. American Lead Works, Hayes Wheel, National Lead and Colgate, all advanced from 2 to 1 point. Call loans renewed as heretofore at 4 per cent.

STOCK MARKET HAS IRREGULAR TREND

Extensive Readjustment of Speculative Accounts Is Expected

New York.—(P)—Further irregularity developed at the opening of Friday's stock market. American Car and Foundry, Allied Chemical, Stock trucks, DuPont and all-American Cables showed early gains of a point or more, the last named touching a new high on the announcement of details of the proposed merger with the International Telephone and Telegraph Company. Houston Oil yielded a point on the first sale.

Extensive readjustment of speculative accounts was regarded as natural after more than four weeks of almost steadily rising prices. Maintenance of the 4 per cent rediscount rate by the New York Federal Reserve bank occasioned little surprise, as hopes of an early reduction were practically abandoned two weeks ago.

Crude oil advanced 1/4 cent to 12 1/2 cents, the price of a new steel hardening process, while U. S. Steel Common lost ground, similar to the decline in the steel industry. Signal were depressed at least two points below yesterday's final quotation. Wheat advanced 1/4 cent to 1 1/2 cents, being bid up nearly three points.

SHARES FAIRLY FIRM
Oil shares held fairly firm on the announcement of an agreement to merge production in the new Sempron oil field, the over production in which is generally believed to be responsible for the recent swooning of crude oil prices. Houston Oil, after sagging over a point to par, rallied to a new high of 12 1/2 cents on the announcement of a court decision in its favor. Comstock Solvents B quickly broke 4 points and Loews and International Telephone encountered further profit-taking. Foreign exchange held steady, with demand sterling quoted around $4.87 1/2 and French francs around 200 1/2 cents.

Various stocks which command a big public following were taken in round amounts in the forenoon, including several of the motor, food, service and public utility issues. General Motors reached 127 1/2, placing it within a half above U. S. Steel. American Lead Works, Hayes Wheel, National Lead and Colgate, all advanced from 2 to 1 point. Call loans renewed as heretofore at 4 per cent.

BLAME DESIRE TO LIVE OVER AGAIN AS SUICIDE CAUSE

New York Psychiatrist Discusses Epidemic of Collegian Suicides

BY GENE COHN
New York—"If I could only do it over again..."

In this despairing thought, which at some time has flashed across the mind of almost everyone, lurks the unrelenting desire to be reborn. And in this subconscious desire for rebirth may be found a somewhat general explanation of suicide.

But, in applying his theory of the modern psychologists to the immediate epidemic of self-annihilation among young students, other mental and psychological factors must be given consideration, says Dr. Richard J. Hoffmann, psychiatrist, Dr. Hoffmann was for a number of years in charge of the clearing house for mental derelicts at New York Postgraduate Hospital, observing in particular the cases of children and adolescents.

1894—A SUICIDAL YEAR
"This suicide epidemic," cites Dr. Hoffmann, "recalls the celebrated outbreak in Germany which attracted international attention from medical men, playwrights, authors and psychologists."

"The suicide rate over a period of years was 57 a year with the age of 15 as average. In 1894 it reached a peak with 84 young suicides recorded. The total number, when the wave ended, was 1708.

"The ratio was four boys to one girl, and there were amazing instances of babes of four and five ending their lives. Among the victims was Weninger, the young mental marvel, who at 23 had written 'Sex and Character.'"

"When the statisticians had finished surveys on the subject they found every conceivable motive, from failing at school to being caught lying. But between the lines one could read the influence of the now famous 'kultur,' which stressed the rigidity of discipline. And whatever the immediate motive, this pressure of discipline underlay a large percentage of cases.

"Now, turning to our own problem: we begin with a crowding of an undeveloped mind. That, in itself, is a factor. In the cases of these young students the esthetic side is stressed. The physical side is practically, or entirely eliminated. In following this esthetic ideal there develops a veritable love and adoration that eliminates all other phases of life. The point is that but one side is developed. Call the national life material, or whatever you will, but surely there is not a great deal of outlet for mind in which the esthetic has become dominant. So, just outside this one track viewpoint, lies discipline in a form considerably different from the 'kultur' of another day and nation. The matter of facing it, however, is just as inevitable.

SEEKING A WAY OUT
"Meanwhile the student has become a prisoner of his own nervousness. When a child finds itself unable to adjust itself comfortably to environmental circumstances it seeks a way out. Everywhere it finds barriers; sometime the teacher, sometimes the parents and sometimes its playmates. Just about then is ingrained that desire for rebirth. Oh, to be someone else! Oh, to have different circumstances! And of course he is unable to rationalize, and see objectively the difficulties of all other humans.

"In some cases this lack of adjustment becomes an obsession. They find they cannot govern their environment, any more than they can control a dream. Their condition is somewhat that of the somnambulist, who must follow an uncontrollable force. In its waking state the mind assumes something of this dream state, going continually over this one path and overlooking all other avenues.

"Those who come to rationalize the situation see these other paths. Thus Gauguin turned to painting and the South Seas. Thus Schopenhauer, who wrote most bitterly of life itself, took it out in his writings.

LIKE A SLEEP-WALKER
"But with the child and adolescent it becomes a fixation, preying constantly and obscuring all else. This fixation becomes associated with his physical as well as mental life and a physical tension follows that mirrors the epileptic state. In the vicious circle the horizon narrows until qualms of conscience are obliterated and there is produced, for the time being, an actual suspension of consciousness—as in the somnambulist. Only the pressure of the one thing is considered.

"It is easy to conceive in such a state, with consciousness practically gone, youth is willing to obliterate life.

"In the background, of course, is the whole story of man, who once needed only to guard over his cave. With the dawn of intellectualism came the respect for authority, discipline and all the rest. And the child, in his growth has a relieve this vast circle.

SALTING THE SEA
New York — Carrying coals to Newcastle was just as logical as the action of the vessel John Hamlen, which limped into port after spilling 100 tons of salt through a hole in its keel. The leak developed near the end of the cruise from the West Indies, and attempts to check it resulted in failure. A coast guard cutter towed the ship to port.
